Foreword

This British Standard has been prepared by Technical Committee IDT/3, Universal Decimal Classification. It supersedes BS 1000:Auxiliaries 1(e):Part 1, BS 1000:Auxiliaries 1(e):Part 2 and BS 1000:Auxiliaries 1(e):Part 3 which have been withdrawn.

The Universal Decimal Classification (UDC) was originally derived from the Dewey Decimal Classification (DDC) and managed by the organization now known as the International Federation for Information and Documentation (FID). It is now the property of the UDC Consortium (UDCC), which was inaugurated on 1 January 1992 with BSI as a founder member. Information about the UDCC can be found on its website at www.udcc.org or obtained from:

The official text of the UDC is the Master Reference File (MRF), a database of about 61 000 entries which is maintained for the UDCC at the Royal Library in the Hague. BSI is the publisher of English editions, and BS 1000M-1 is derived from the MRF. The version previously known as the “full edition”, totalling about 220 000 entries and published in sections, is no longer maintained at that level of detail but some publishers issue certain sections at a similar level of detail to the full edition. These are now called “extended editions”.

This extended edition of part of UDC Auxiliary table 1e, Common auxiliaries of place for United Kingdom and Germany, contains material authorized in Extensions and Corrections to the UDC, volume 19, November 1997 (for Germany) [1] and volume 20, November 1998 (for the United Kingdom) [2]. This material is accepted by the UDC Editorial Board as a recognized extension to the MRF.

The complete tables of the UDC are available in BS 1000M and its supplements. Further information about the UDC and its application can be found in the Guide to the use of UDC [3].

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the information in this publication, but the names used, the selection and sequence of regions, descriptive expressions and relations implied by the numeric hierarchy do not constitute an endorsement of their national or international status either by BSI or by any of its cooperating organizations. No opinions about any of these matters should be inferred from this publication.

A British Standard does not purport to include all necessary provisions of a contract. Users of British Standards are responsible for their correct application.

Compliance with a British Standard does not of itself confer immunity from legal obligations.

Summary of pages

This document comprises a front cover, an inside front cover, pages i and ii, pages 1 to 33 and a back cover.

1 Scope

1.1 Scope of table 1e

The UDC common auxiliaries of place, signified by “brackets-one-to-nine” (1/9), indicate the geographical range, locality or other spatial aspect of an item of information. They may be cited with main numbers when the place aspect is secondary, or combined with different auxiliaries or other place auxiliaries. They may also be used independently, so creating a sequence in which the place facet is the only one expressed — for instance, in indexing certain kinds of map. Examples of use and of combination with other numbers are given in BS 1000M.

1.2 Scope of this edition

This extended edition of part of table 1e contains the administrative divisions of the United Kingdom and Germany to tertiary level (districts, Kreise etc.). On the principle that there will often be a need for tables at an extended level of detail for one's own country and for certain other users specializing in information about the country concerned, the tables given here are subdivided to a greater level of detail than those in the Master Reference File (see the Foreword) but are compatible with it. They take account of the new administrative arrangements in Germany following reunification in 1990 and in the United Kingdom following reorganizations between 1995 and 1998. At the time of writing, reorganization is imminent in the Republic of Ireland; for the time being, it remains at (417/419), subdivided to county level. The traditional divisions of the UK are retained at (411/429) to allow for historical information. Similarly, provision is made for the obsolete divisions of Eastern Germany, and the subdivisions for the pre-1934 states are retained.

2 Structure and notation

Expressive notation has been assigned to the new divisions of the UK and Germany and is structured as follows.

(410) 3-digit number: UNITED KINGDOM

4-digit numbers: COUNTRIES

5-digit numbers: REGIONS (England)

6-digit numbers: Counties and areas of former counties (England and Wales)

Areas of former regions (Scotland)

8-digit numbers: Districts and unitary authorities of similar area

(430) 3-digit number: GERMANY

6-digit numbers LÄNDER

7-digit numbers Regierungsbezirke

9-digit numbers: Kreise and Kreisfreie Städte

3 Background and terminology

3.1 United Kingdom

The trend in the UK reorganizations of 1995 to 1998 was towards single-tier regional authorities, called “unitary authorities”. This was carried out consistently in Wales and Scotland, while England has a mixed system and Northern Ireland had already had unitary authorities since 1973. Where a county in England or a region in Scotland has ceased to exist, the word “area” has been added, e.g. at (410.118) “Berkshire area”. Unitary authorities in England are indicated by the term “(unitary authority)”, e.g. at (410.121.23) “Portsmouth (unitary authority)”, in Scotland and Wales, which are entirely unitary, this distinction is unnecessary.

3.2 Germany

The administrative divisions of western Germany (the pre-1990 Federal Republic) are unchanged in name and status. Following reunification, five eastern states (Länder) were reinstated and Land Berlin was enlarged by the addition of the eastern districts. Throughout the table, except at (430) itself, the class descriptions give priority to the native names. Within the descriptions (not the notes), terms in parentheses (...) are part of the German name and terms in square brackets [...] are English conventional names.

More information about the background to these revisions, and about sources of further information, both in print form and on websites, may be found in the relevant issues of Extensions and Corrections to the UDC [1], [2].

5 Explanation of symbols

The symbols in the left margin indicate the relation of the entries to those in previous English editions and have the following meanings.

- + New number and text
- × Cancelled number and text (these entries are in small type)
- ! Modified text (same number)
- Unchanged entry

The following symbol occurs within UDC entries:
