Foreword

The English version of the Universal Decimal Classification (UDC) is being prepared and published as BS 1000 by BSI at the original joint request of the British Society for International Bibliography (BSIB) and the Association of Special Libraries and Information Bureaux (ASLIB), now amalgamated as Aslib. It has the approval of the Lake Placid Education Foundation, New York, proprietors of the Dewey Decimal Classification, from which UDC derives. The English full edition of the UDC is authorized by the International Federation for Documentation (FID), PO Box 90402, 2509 LK, The Hague, Netherlands.

This section is part of the English full edition. It should be read in conjunction with a concise edition such as BS 1000M, which refers to many other subjects of interest not listed in this schedule, and provides a conspectus of the whole scheme, together with an introduction to its use. For further practical information about the principles, application and utilization of the scheme, users should refer to BS 1000C. See also BS 1000: Auxiliaries (containing the common auxiliary signs and subdivisions except those of place), of which the introduction is also relevant to this fascicle.

This edition of the second part of Table I (e) replaces material published as part of BS 1000: Vol. 1, Part 1 : 1943, and supersedes BS 1000: Auxiliaries I (e) : Part 2 : 1983, which is withdrawn. The latter contained only UDC (41/42) and was issued as an interim measure. This edition includes modifications authorized in 'Extensions and Corrections to the UDC' (FID publication no. 248) up to and including Series 13, No. 1, dated August 1987. Subsequent issues of 'Extensions and Corrections to the UDC' should be consulted to keep the table up to date. British Standards related to this part of BS 1000 are listed on the inside back cover.

Compliance with a British Standard does not of itself confer immunity from legal obligations.

Amendment No. 1
published and effective from 31 July 1991 to BS 1000 : Auxiliaries I(e):
Part 2 : 1988

NOTE. This amendment adds to BS 1000 : Auxiliaries I(e): Part 2 the complete new classification for Germany recently authorized by FID (as well as the other entries in Extensions and corrections to the UDC, Series 13 No. 3, that affect this part of BS 1000). Since that authorization, the two German states have been reunited, but as there is still a need to classify information about the separate states, the classification is now made available to users of BS 1000. Information about Germany as a whole may continue to be classed at (430).

ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX OF AMENDMENTS

Insert after the existing index the following index of amendments, five pages, attached.

ALPHABETICAL SUBJECT INDEX OF AMENDMENTS

This is a computer-generated index, produced by permutation of terms, and intervention has been kept to a minimum. Qualifiers are not included unless they are already present in the table. Some diacritics and characters from extended roman alphabets had to be disregarded in the index, though they appear in the table.

Never classify solely from the index; always verify in the table. This index of amendments should be used in conjunction with the main index and the table to which it refers. The alphabetical arrangement is word-by-word.

Introduction

1 General

The introduction to BS 1000: Auxiliaries I(e): Part 1 is applicable to the whole of Table I(e). A few clauses, however, are summarized here, and additional information presented.

2 Scope

This part of Table I(e) contains common auxiliaries of place (3), denoting places of the ancient world, and (4), denoting modern Europe.

3 Related subjects

Table I(d) Common auxiliaries of form

91 Geography

4 Combination. Citation order. Independent use

The common auxiliaries of place may be cited with main numbers when the place aspect is secondary, or combined with different auxiliaries or with other place auxiliaries. They may also be used independently, so creating a sequence in which the place facet is the only one expressed.

5 Auxiliary signs and subdivisions

Information about auxiliary signs and subdivisions will be found in BS 1000 : Auxiliaries, BS 1000C and BS 1000M.

5.1 Common auxiliaries. The whole of Table I(e) consists of common auxiliaries. Colon combinations and other auxiliaries may, however, be used in the normal way e.g.

(410+44)	Britain and France
(410:44)	Britain in relation to France
(410.11:410)	South East in relation to the UK as a whole
(410.166/.168)	The English border counties

5.2 Special auxiliaries. The special auxiliaries listed under (1) are applicable throughout Table I(e), e.g.

(1-04)	Limiting zones. Boundaries
(410-04)	Boundaries of the UK
([410.1:410.3]-04)	Boundary between England and Wales

6 Classification of the United Kingdom

6.1 Background. Over the period 1965 to 1975, the administrative divisions of the UK were reorganized, and the new subdivisions of (410) were created to allow for this.

The notation is expressive; each level of administrative hierarchy is represented by a constant-length number. The concept order is also consistent, starting with the area of the capital and working in an anti-clockwise sequence; the pattern is repeated in little at each successive level.

6.2 Relation to the previous classification. Only areas that have been reorganized have been reclassified, that is; parts of the UK. The numbers for places in (41/42) that are not in the UK, i.e. the Republic of Ireland, the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, are left undisturbed.

Also mostly unaltered are the numbers for the traditional divisions of the UK, which are still in use for some purposes. As the concepts are unchanged, it seemed best to preserve stability, even though the order is not ideal. In short, (411/429) remains much as it was.

6.3 Classification policy

6.3.1 General. The British Isles in general are classed at (41); also included are a few places not strictly in the British Isles, but related to them: Rockall, which is part of the UK, and the Channel Islands, which are associated with it. Information about all or most of these entities may be classed here. General information about Great Britain, and the larger concept of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, both go at (410). At lower levels, decisions have to be made.

6.3.2 Historical files. In principle, (411/429) can be used for classifying counties that no longer exist, while the current UK administrative divisions can go at the subdivisions of (410); but there is still the problem of where to class several counties that are substantially the same (or even exactly the same) as they were before the Local Government Act, 1972, took effect. If a historical file is to be maintained, a cut-off date has to be established (1973 for Northern Ireland, 1974 for England and Wales, 1975 for Scotland). New material about an unchanged county, e.g. Cornwall post-1974, goes at the (410) subdivision, i.e. (410.197); but material about Cornwall up to 1974 goes at the old number (423.7). Documents containing both kinds of information, and non-specific ones, have to be classed in duplicate. This has the undesirable effect of arbitrarily dividing information about an unchanged entity, and distributing it between two numbers, but there is no escape if historical concepts are to be retained.

6.3.3 Filing into the current sequence. Users new to UDC (or reviewing policy) have to decide whether to bother classing such information among the old numbers, since it could be fitted into the new sequence, even if only approximately. An old county that has been divided into several new counties can be approximately represented by a range number, e.g. old Lancashire could be represented as the sum of new Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside, i.e. (410.172/.176); this is not precisely accurate, but perhaps is simpler than having to look for a single subject at two different numbers. Where several old counties have merged to form a new one, the new number may suffice, e.g. both the old Herefordshire and Worcestershire could be classed at the number for Hereford and Worcester (410.184), which is a larger concept but not a contradictory one. Sometimes a district within a new county corresponds to an entire old county, e.g. in the county of Powys (410.135), the districts of Brecknock, Radnor and Montgomery correspond to the old counties of Brecknockshire, Radnorshire and Montgomeryshire, which might as well be classed at the same numbers. Finally, the new sequence sometimes provides for a conceptual unit which, though historically valid, was not previously provided for, e.g. the industrial area around Birmingham was formerly divided among Staffordshire, Worcestershire and Warwickshire, but could now be classed at the single number for West Midlands Metropolitan County, (410.188). It might well be convenient to class all information about this area at the one number, regardless of date.

6.3.4 Conclusion. As there is not yet general agreement on a recommended procedure, the options described are offered to the user.

6.4 The Metropolitan Counties. Since the subdivisions of (410) were authorized, the Metropolitan County authorities have been abolished, but there are no boundary changes, and the current numbers may continue to be used to denote those areas.
