Foreword

This British Standard has been prepared under the direction of the Office and Information Standards Committee to make it technically equivalent to ISO 6234 “Bank operations — Authorized signature lists and their representation on microfiche” published in 1981 by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO).

Apart from editorial changes, this British Standard differs from ISO 6234 only in that the reference to ISO 1831 has not been included. ISO 1831 “Printing specifications for optical character recognition”, published in 1971 by the International Organization for Standardization (ISO), has not been accepted by the UK because it is not applicable as a specification. This British Standard will be reviewed when the British Standard covering the scope of ISO 1831, which is in course of preparation, is published.

For ease of reproduction, the ISO text has been used, with changes made, as appropriate. Some terminology and certain conventions, therefore, are not identical with those used in British Standards; attention is drawn especially to the following.

The comma has been used throughout as a decimal marker. In British Standards it is current practice to use a full point on the base line as the decimal marker.

A British Standard does not purport to include all the necessary provisions of a contract. Users of British Standards are responsible for their correct application.

Compliance with a British Standard does not of itself confer immunity from legal obligations.
