American National Standard

An American National Standard implies a consensus of those substantially concerned with its scope and provisions. An American National Standard is intended as a guide to aid the manufacturer, the consumer, and the general public. The existence of an American National Standard does not in any respect preclude anyone, whether he has approved the standard or not, from manufacturing, marketing, purchasing, or using products, processes, or procedures not conforming to the standard. American National Standards are subject to periodic review and users are cautioned to obtain the latest editions.

CAUTION NOTICE: This American National Standard may be revised or withdrawn at any time. The procedures of the American National Standards Institute require that action be taken to reaffirm, revise, or withdraw this standard no later than five years from the date of publication. Purchasers of American National Standards may receive current information on all standards by calling or writing the American National Standards Institute.

Foreword

(This Foreword is not a part of American National Standard General Requirements for Synchronous Machines, C50.10-1977.)

Developed over a period of more than two years within a working group that reflected wide industrial experience in both the manufacture and use of Synchronous Machines, American National Standard C50.10-1977 received the unanimous approval of the C50.1 Subcommittee on Synchronous Machines as well as the full endorsement of American National Standards Committee C50 on Rotating Electrical Machinery.

It is the intent of C50 to revise and update this standard at regular intervals, and comments on this document, including recommendations for its revision, will be welcomed by the Committee. Please forward comments to the Secretary, American National Standard Committee C50, American National Standards Institute, 1430 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10018.

At the time it approved this standard, American National Standards Committee C50 on Rotating Electrical Machinery had the following membership:

C. C. Cummins, Chairman

Fred Huber, Jr, Secretary
