American National Standard

An American National Standard implies a consensus of those substantially concerned with its scope and provisions. An American National Standard is intended as a guide to aid the manufacturer, the consumer, and the general public. The existence of an American National Standard does not in any respect preclude anyone, whether he has approved the standard or not, from manufacturing, marketing, purchasing, or using products, processes, or procedures not conforming to the standard. American National Standards are subject to periodic review and users are cautioned to obtain the latest editions.

CAUTION NOTICE: This American National Standard may be revised or withdrawn at any time. The procedures of the American National Standards Institute require that action be taken to reaffirm, revise, or withdraw this standard no later than five years from the date of publication. Purchasers of American National Standards may receive current information on all standards by calling or writing the American National Standards Institute.

Foreword

(This Foreword is not a part of ANSI N317-1980 American National Standard Performance Criteria for Instrumentation Used for Inplant Plutonium Monitoring.)

This standard was prepared under the joint sponsorship of the American National Standards Committee on Instrumentation, N42, and the American National Standards Committee on Radiation Protection, N13. The members of both N42 and N13 reviewed and approved this standard.

The ANSI Committee on Instrumentation, N42, and Radiation Protection, N13, had the following representatives at the time this standard was approved.
